COVER

Those sweet, innocent kitten faces, they really didn't fool you, did they? They belong to the same kind of kittens we all have—lively and mischievous as the devil. But Lois Anne Davis of Pittsburgh artist insists she caught her two in an angelic mood!

THANK YOU

Just a few words of thank you this month to every one of you thirteen thousand and more kind subscribers who have cooperated with us so thoroughly in carrying through the small price advance which we found necessary in June.

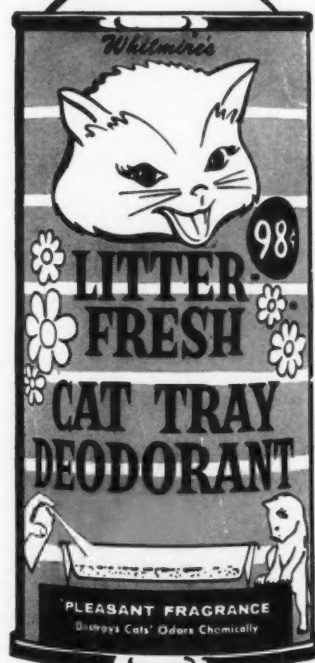

As we promised you, your cooperation is helping us to move forward with our plans for continuing to improve CATS Magazine.

The first step was arranging to mail your copies flat this spring, rather than with a crease through the center. This fall we will change our editorial design slightly to permit us to include more pictures, and we hope to average at least two pages more of general editorial matter each month.

Our printer is continuing to give us one of the finest printing jobs in the country, and our free-lance writers, researchers, artists, and photographers seem to be out-doing themselves in providing top-notch material about cats.

One goal we won't be able to attain right away is that of providing you with natural color photographs of cats. That's still in the future, but as our circulation and advertising increase, it comes closer every year.

Working with you and for you who love cats and knowing that we are helping and entertaining you and your pets is accomplishment enough in itself. Yet we realize that there are still many ways in which we can serve you better—and we look forward to doing so every month of the years ahead.

Brand new aerosol that dispels offending odors instantly—makes your kitten a much more pleasant house pet. Simply spray cat's litter tray or bedding—takes but seconds, lasts for days. Harmless to pets and fabrics. Delightful fragrance. Full 6-ounce bomb... 98¢

Cats Question Box

Conducted By E. A. Renaux, D.V.M.

Three weeks ago my Blue Point Siamese queen was given two hormone injections in her right leg for milk flow. Immediately after, she began to walk on the entire lower half of the leg as though it could not bear her weight. There has been little or no improvement. There is no nodule or inflammation present and my veterinarian says patience, patience. I can not believe this condition is normal and I am quite concerned.

—Miss E. L. Lippincott

1330 S. 6th St., Louisville 8, Ky.

From your description it sounds as though there has been some injury or damage done to the tendon that supports the leg from the foot to the hock. The injection should have had no effect on this. However, there may be some paralytic effect if the material that was injected was close to some of the nerve fibers. This can take some time for improvement to show.

Do most Persians have a weakness in their respiratory systems? I have two of them, and one is constantly blocked up and has the symptoms of a bad sinus condition. Veterinarian help relieves it for a short period, but he invariably comes down with another cold. Any suggestions?

—H. E. Richardson

97 Main St., Norwich, Conn.

Most of the pets that have a very "pushed in" face are subject to upper respiratory trouble. It is one of the conditions that have been brought about by the desire for a particular feature of a particular strain. In gaining one thing something else usually must be given us.

What would cause a two-year-old Siamese male to throw up his food? Every two or three weeks he has a period when he cannot retain his meals. Aside from the mess, there seems to be no trouble after he gets it up. He was raised on cat food with occasional bite-sized pieces of beef kidneys. He refuses liver and most other foods.

—Mrs. Hilda Sylvester

916 W. Tabor Rd., Philadelphia 41, Pa.

I cannot explain this. When you notice that one of these periods is beginning, it might be helpful to give the cat very small amounts of food to eat at one time, but feed several times a day. You might even keep all food and milk away for one full day and allow the stomach to be empty for this period.

You must get weary of diet problems, but what to do with a cat who simply won't eat anything but beef kidneys. I have starved her for two days in a row, then her begging and crying caused me to give in. She, of course, has a skin condition which causes her to dig and scratch at herself. I tried giving her halibut oil capsules but stopped as I didn't know if it was the right thing to do. Have you any suggestions?

—Mrs. H. E. Barney

141 Auburn Ave., Buffalo 13, N. Y.

Patience, fortitude, ingenuity and stubbornness on your part. Cat sure good at these attributes, and the owners have to be more so.

Are there some conditions that demand everlasting medication? My ten-month-old neutered Red Persian has been suffering from sores on his neck that form scabs and seem to itch. They go away and leave the skin thickened for weeks. He also has a sore in his mouth and the gums are inflamed. He has been wormed, has had a one-week treatment of antibiotic solution. His urine was alkaline and at present I'm giving him tablets which keep the urine at neutral or just slightly acid. He eats well and his general condition seems better after this treatment but he is not cured for he can't seem to get along without his constant medication.

The Readers Always Write

PLEASE

Dear Editors:

Ever since I was a little girl I have always had cats, all kinds, to love. I am enclosing a photo of the one I have now. This picture was taken over two years ago, but it is a pose that is still affected daily.

My mother had recently returned from the hospital from having her leg amputated and was sitting at the table in a wheel chair eating her dinner when Sonny Boy decided he wanted to eat, too. It brought results, so now he sits up every-time he is hungry.

He is the only pet in the house and his desires come first at all times. My mother, my father and I all idolize him.

Loves to ride in a car and when we do go without him, we have to find a baby sitter for him. He is spoiled, but doesn't he look like he deserves to be?

STATUS FINDER

Dear Editors:

Having noted several complaints recently that CATS is geared to show people, I spent a few minutes with the May issue to determine how many pages of the twenty-four might be of interest to breeder-fanciers only.

I am assuming that those who would like CATS to be devoted to the exclusive interest of those who do not show their cats, do not object to the ads for equipment, supplies, toys, and so forth, nor to the breeders who give information as to what breeds of cats are obtainable and where. After all, many of those who do not show are proud of their pedigreed pets, and CATS must have advertising revenue to be available at all.

Getting down to the actual articles, I found that May editorial is cat-show minded, and though less than one-third of a page, we'll call it a full third. The article on summer grooming with the fall shows in mind has general and practical interest so it can hardly be of exclusive interest to show people. The article, Cat Show Judge . . . 1980 Model, sounds as if it would interest show people only, so we'll add another page and a quarter. In truth, it is an item that should provide a chuckle for anyone. The one and one-half pages of Show Reports and Show Calendar are certainly exclusively for those who show. One and one-eighth pages are devoted to Association ads. In all, approximately four and one-third pages out of twenty-four might be said to be of interest to fanciers only. As one whose show cats are also pets, I don't find this disproportionate.

There is an old saw, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em," so for those who find nothing of interest in this low show percentage of CATS, I recommend they enter their pet in the next show. There are classes for all, including any conceivable combination of domesticated cat, in the Household Pet Class. They just might find a fascinating new hobby and a new way to enjoy their pets. I did.

I like CATS and read all of it.

BRAVO

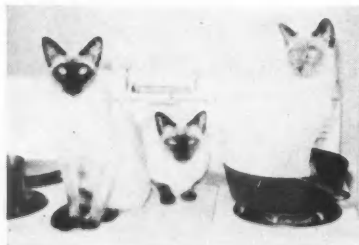

Dear Editors:

After thirty years of working with cats adopted as kittens and abandoned as cats, I know the terror and misery they face.

I am now representing Friends of Animals in my locality and we will be glad to help anyone have their pet spayed or neutered at prices within the reach of all. For the destitute, means will be found to have their pets altered without charge.

CHEFS

Dear Editors:

No Blue points on the half-shell here. In Texas we have them in the skillet. Jo-Pau Dancer, a Blue Point Siamese, always manages to get to cooking class first and get the very best seat. Gi Gi and Jo-Pau Wee Nee have to settle for the top of the grill. They love having their pictures taken.

PARTY LINE

Dear Editors:

My friend, Miss Patricia Mortimer, dearly loves cats and CATS Magazine. We board our cat with her, and she has two Siamese, Cindy and Cinder, of her own.

Here is a picture of Cinder. She has a party telephone with eleven or twelve other people on the same line. Every time the phone rings, Cinder jumps on the stand and works with the receiver until he gets it off the hook. The neighbors are all aware of this and know what has happened when the line is out of order. The Mortimers are kept busy just checking their phone.

We hope you continue to prosper and grow.

IT'S A WOMAN'S WORLD

Dear Editors:

I was amused to see a letter from one of your readers telling about a cat that mothers all kittens in the house. I have a male cat that does the same thing.

Recently our Himalayan cats became parents for the first time. Almost from the start, the father insisted on taking full charge. Every time we came into the room, there he was with his kittens—industriously scrubbing them while the mother lounged in a nearby chair watching the entire operation.

TECHNICAL QUERIST

Dear Editors:

I think the variety and quality of your coverage are remarkable. There are two subjects I would enjoy seeing treated in articles in the magazine.

1. The qualifications required of students entering veterinary medicine and the required training given veterinarians.

2. A report on the most recent findings in animal psychology. I have been told that some veterinarians are particularly interested in this field.

I also appreciate reviews, or at least notice, of new literature on cats . . . be it fact or fiction.

Is it a pleasure to race through a new copy of CATS and to re-enjoy old issues.

All-Southern and All-Eastern CATS Awards Announced

Presented for your pleasure, beginning on page 22 of this issue of CATS, are the highest-scoring of this year's show cats in the East and the South. Those who have earned the CATS Magazine designations of All-Eastern and All-Southern and the Southern and Eastern Honorable Mention as compiled from the show wins awarded them during the season by the qualified judges of all five cat associations.

This is the middle month of our award series of issues. Last month the Western and Midwestern cats were introduced. In September will come the All-Americans and the Cat of the Year and OS Cat of the Year presentations.

The beautiful winning cats and their proud owners invite you to join them at the show—now taking place here in your own arm chair.

TEXANS TAKE 39 IN SOUTH

Of the record-breaking 152 Southern award winners named this month by CATS Magazine, an impressive thirty-nine go to cats residing in Texas. Florida cats, who led in 1959, are runners-up this year with twenty-five.

Maryland claims nineteen, Kentucky sixteen, Louisiana twelve, and Georgia ten. One-figure totals are: Tennessee four, Oklahoma eight, Columbia two, Virginia five, and South Carolina and Alabama six each.

This is by far the most even distribution of wins ever recorded in the South and is evidence of the widening spread of interest in cats everywhere. Only Arkansas, North Carolina, and Mississippi failed to place winners—and they lost in each case by only a few points.

Leading Southern Cat is Chez Mouquette Cal of Nor-Mont, fine Cream Longhair male of Mrs. Merald E. Hoag, Rockville, Md. He will be the South's candidate for Cat of the Year.

Second-Highest Southern Cat, Best Shorthair, and Best Female is the famous Blue Point Siamese Female Qd. Gr. Ch. Van Lyn's Platine, who gains this honor after having been Southern Honorable Mention Kitten in 1957 and All-Southern in 1959. Owned by Lynne Vanderpoel of Nanticoke, Md., Platine was the April 1960 CATS cover girl. Now she carries the banner of the South in the competition for O.S. Cat of the Year and top American Shorthair.

OS Southern Longhair Cat is Nor-Mont Saucy, Blue; OS Shorthair is RM Qd. Ch. Fan-T-Cee Firefly of Daz-Zling (SHM 59), Blue Point Siamese. High-Scoring Manx award goes to RM Db. Gr. and Db. Ch. Tra-Mar's Woodcutter (AS 59); OS to Qd. Ch. Lucellia. Top Domestic is Barlyn's Ebony Duchess of

SOUTHERN TOP TEN

1. Chez Mouquette Cal of Nor-Mont, Cream Longhair Male
2. Qd. Gr. Ch. Van Lyn's Platine, Blue Point Siamese Female
3. (Tie) Db. Ch. Nor-Mont's Simone's Randy, Cream Longhair Male.
3. (Tie) Sheromar's Boy Wonder of Nor-Mont (AS 59), Chinchilla Longhair Male.
5. Nor-Mont Saucy—Blue Longhair Female
6. RM Qd. Ch. Fan-T-Cee Firefly of Daz-Zling (SHM 59), Blue Point Siamese Male
7. Medicine Lake Sakie of Nor-Mont (AS 59)
8. Fan-T-Cee Kabir Katrina of Dao (HMH 59), Blue Point Siamese Female
9. Nor-Mont Duchess, Tortoiseshell Longhair
10. Db. Gr. & Qd. Ch. Van Lyn's Dilly Boy, Frost Point Siamese Male.

Nor-Mont with Db. & Qd. Ch. Miss Hogan's George (AS-AA 59) carrying off the OS honors.

The Nor-Mont name leads the kittens also in the person of Nor-Mont Anne. OS High-Scoring Southern Kitten is Gray Horse Farm Museam Piece.

In this first year of scoring Neuters and Spays the top Neuter was RM Db. Gr. Ch. Jer-i-Mey Dandy Boy with Gr. Ch. Kitty Cove Priscilla leading all the Spays.

The late Maud Barney's Floridanus of Tangelo has the longest Southern record of any cat. His first win was made in 1952, and he earned a Southern award every year after except for 1959. Other long-timers are Far-Fin's Mr. Quarter-Note who started in 1954. Southland's Deborah and Gr. & Tr. Ch. Citrus Ridge Tre-Jur's Sir Echo began their All-Southern careers in 1955.

Four other cats entered the winning lists in 1956; four in 1957; fifteen in 1958; and thirty-two are wearing the laurels gained last year for the first time.

As for people, Mrs. Hoag leads in number of winners with nine, Mrs. Mathews Cole has six, Lynn Vanderpoel five, and Sally Kisler and Mrs. E. A. Rogers four each.

MINQUA SETS SECTIONAL RECORD

Climaxing five years of leading the East in number of wins, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Martinke's Minqua Cattery of Newark, Delaware, is setting a new national record this season in gaining twelve 1960 sectional awards.

Brightest of these twelve stars in the Eastern firmament is Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Minqua's Juniata, Blue Longhair of outstanding type and color who is highest-scoring of all the Eastern cats and who becomes her section's entry for 1960 Cat-of-the-Year honors.

OS Eastern Cat, Highest-Scoring Shorthair, Second Highest Cat, and the East's entry for O.S. Cat of the Year and All-American Shorthair is Gr. Ch. Monk-Chaing Frostee, Frost Point Siamese Male owned by Sara Reynolds of Oxford, Pa.

Neither of these great cats is new to the East. Juniata was All-Eastern Kitten in 1958 and AE, AHM in 1959 while Frostee scored AE in 1959.

Highest-Scoring OS Eastern Shorthair is Ch. Bridle Trail's Sprite of Astra, with OS Longhair honors going to Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Minqua's Punxsutawney. Top Manx is Wila Blite Pola of Silva-Wyde; OS, Truantal Christopher. Ag. Trinket of Mottohope is top Domestic with OS being Silver Quest Titanic.

Db. Ch. Evergreen's Elegance of Skyway had a busy season gaining for himself top position as All-Eastern HS Kitten plus AE Odd-Eyed White LH Male. OS Kitten is Ch. Thani Choco Chip of Grandyl. Ch. Vauxhall Von of Kingshill pulled the second rare double-header of EHMK and EHM Tortie Longhair.

Premier Jefferson Davis of Dickens came through to be top Neuter in the East with Pa-An De De achieving HS Spay.

Qd. Gr. Ch. Mrs. Kelly of An-Si has the longest award-winning record of the East. Her first AE letter was earned in 1954, with 1960 marking her seventh consecutive AE triumph in a career which includes High-Scoring AE for 1956. Next in seniority are Tr. Ch. Robelaine's Resplendent, Db. Gr. & Qd. Ch. Casa Gatos Zarina O'Bograe, and Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Minqua's Punxsutawney who began their illustrious careers in 1956. Three other Eastern winners gained their first awards in 1957, fourteen in 1958, and twenty-three in 1959.

The record shows, too, that of this year's 140 winners five are former Eastern Kitten Award winners—three in the Top Ten. In addition to Juniata they are Db. Ch. Willowood Feather of Minqua (AE, AEK, AHMK 59) and Punxsutawney (EHMK 56; AE 57, 58; AE, AA 59) owned by the Martinkes, Richard Gebhardt's Wila Blite Pola of Silva-Wyde (AEK, AE, AA 59), and the Schuler's Db. Gr. & Qd. Ch. Selenes Firefly (AEK, AE 58; AE, AA 59).

The Martinkes own another distinction. Rather than as announced last month, it is they who first swept an entire class—taking all four Eastern Brown Tabby LH wins in 1956. This year Nikki Horner took the four Midwest CE Whites, and now in the East the Martinkes are repeating their 1956 feat.

Runners-up in number of wins are Mrs. V. V. Schuh with five and Karen Hills with four.

EASTERN TOP TEN

1. Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Minqua's Juniata (AEK 58, AE, AHM 59), Blue Longhair Female.
2. Gr. Ch. Monk-Chaing Frostee (AE 59), Frost Point Siamese Male.
3. (Tie) Db. Ch. Nor-Mont's Simone's Randy, Cream Longhair Male.
4. Ch. Bridle Trail's Sprite of Astra, Blue Point Siamese Female.
5. Tr. Ch. Newton's Shadow of Bonnie Brae, Seal Point Siamese Female.
6. Tr. Ch. Bean Ridge Hi-Fi (AE 59), Shaded Silver Female.
7. Wila Blite Pola of Silva-Wyde (AEK, AE, AA 59), Copper-Eyed White Manx Female.
8. Fan-T-Cee Kabir Katrina of Dao (HMH 59), Blue Point Siamese
9. Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Minqua's Punxsutawney (EHMK, AE 56; AE 57, 58; AE, AA 59), Blue Cream Longhair Female.
10. Db. Gr. & Qd. Ch. Casa Gatos Zarina O'Bograe (AE, AA 56, 57, 58, 59), Russian Blue Female.

Displaced cat, how dare you

THE KITTEN

A kitten is more than a mew and a purr
Done up in a jacket of thistledown fur.
A kitten is all you can ask for, and more—
To cuddle and cherish, to love and adore.

A kitten has four little starfish paws,
Each correctly equipped with scimitar claws.
A kitten is loving, and trusting, and wise—
As you know very well when you look in its eyes.

A kitten is somehow, so touchingly young!
With its wee ivory teeth, and its pink rose-leaf tongue.
Its eyes are so innocent, pleading and tragic—
Even non-kitten lovers succumb to the magic!

From all of this raving, you'll likely deduce
I've a weakness for kittens, I give no excuse;
From their little pink noses
To their little white mittens—
I cheerfully own that I'm mad about kittens!

—Edith Osborne Thompson

TELL ME, PRETTY SIAMESE

Tell me, Pretty Siamese,
Have you occidental fleas?
Or are they exotic too
Who wine and dine
On fancy you?

Are their infants snowy white
Who darken as exposed to light
And are they dressed for masquerade
With tails and faces
Deep in shade?

It may be I'll investigate
With powder can I'll lie in wait
But then how sad to find that they
Are common things
In every way!

No, I prefer to dream and snatch
A fleeting glimpse of those you scratch
And wonder how endowed the fleas
That feast on glamour
Siamese.

—Betty Lowry

SOLITARY SENTINEL

In Yucatan
Eyes of a cat
Chiseled of stone
Shine jade:
Fixed slits,
Green as a glade,
Loom out
Alone
In bleakest space
Long black beneath
The pyramid's
Dank cone,
Tomb-hushed
Its unwashed air
Where flits
The bat.

—Lucile Dandeleit

THE OLD YELLOW CAT

*The old yellow cat has lived his nine lives
Right up to the finish and still he survives.
His body survives through sheer strength of will,
And no other cat can conquer or kill.
He walks stiff and slow against the long cold,
But his green eyes still gleam, and they never grow old.*

*Let young bloods strut their strength before him
Their snarls will soon be their own requiem.*

*But here is the question which plagues me tonight
Does he fight to live, or just live to fight?*

—Mary Ellen Jackson

HOME DECORATORS

Busy Tim and busy Andy,
How my flowers grow
Upon the table and the couch
In a ragged row.

Roses grow from bureau drawers,
Lilacs in the sink.
This is in realms of home decor,
A new approach I think.

Who but you would pause to drape
Pansies on a book,
To give your home an added charm
And a lived-in look.

—Hazel T. Martin

CAT IN THE CLOVER

Cat in the clover
Back and forth rolling
Over and over . . .

Are you thus extolling
The wondrous gift a Nature
Bounteous and true,
In this emerald treasure,
Has bestowed on you?

—Catherine Walker

BEAUTY

*What holds more beauty than the grace
Of a kitten giving chase
To spinning spools and wind-tossed scraps
And teasing them with velvet taps?*

—Bertha Hudelson

WHY DON'T YOU GET A NEW CAT?

My little cat is lost.
Out of the litter he was far the most
Appealing, and from babyhood
Was witty, wise and good.
He curled on the pink satin of my bed
Like a round inkspot, with a tail and head.

The smell of him was countrified and sweet,
Like meadows in the heat.
Those grasses he would wander every day;

Make himself secret nests and tunnels,
play
At catching butterflies. His mock alarms

Propelled him to my arms.
There he would arch high, yawning
like an imp,
Before collapsing, ready to lie limp
With narrow, topaz eyes, his needle claws

Hid in his pushing paws.
He was all mine. But now that he is grown,

He senses, probably, "To each his own,"
And seeks a tiny tigress for a mate —
But he might bring her home, and I shall wait.

—Marion Lineaweaver

REASONABLY ACCURATE FACSIMILE

Lazy yellow cat asleep
On this soft cushion at my feet
All day long as I dust and sweep
And cook and stir
You lie and sleep
And stretch and purr.

Yet I like to have you here with me
For this is my philosophy:
You are a good facsimile
Of what I'd be
If I were you
And you were me.

—Mildred B. Grenier

MY KITTEN'S PAWS

My kitten has soft little pads
Under all her paws,
And every time she presses them
Out pop her sharp claws.

—Regina Sanro

How about leaving it open next time? This is a heavy door for a little guy like me!

I have a little shadow that goes in and out with me. . .

When I read, he cuddles in my lap. When I talk on the telephone, he sits on the night stand and listens. When I'm in the shower, he sits outside the door washing himself. And when I type, he observes the dancing keys with curiosity.

He likes me as well when I have curlers in my hair and a cold in my head as he does when I'm wearing a new hairdo and a bright blue dancing dress.

Some people think Butchie is a psycho. Perhaps a session with a psychiatrist would help, but he's not allowed on couches.

But if loyalty, obedience, pride and intelligence are the marks of being psychotic, maybe more of us should be afflicted.

He thinks he's a human being. He has never learned he's a cat. He eyes other felines with curiosity, sometimes distaste, the way people might observe animals in a zoo or creatures from outer space.

Making a trailerist out of him after he had lived nine years in a house with a large fenced back yard with lots of trees, shrubs and flowers to explore for bugs was no easy task.

Like many individuals, he resents change. He can't see any reason for rearranging furniture or buying new appliances. Butchie is a creature of habit. If I, in a moment of sentimentality like a doting parent, permit him to curl up beside me on the bed, I know he will be there the next day at the same time. If I cavort with him in a corner of the living room by dragging a piece of string for him to capture, he will be there the next evening looking for the elusive string.

When Butchie was just a handful of silky stripes, peering at me coyly over the edge of a small shoe box, I didn't realize it was time to fortify him for life's hurdles. I should have taught him to endure auto-

PORTRAIT OF A FELINE TRAILERIST

by Dorothy White

mobile rides, impervious to freeway tieups, impatient horns, and rumbling trucks. I should have conditioned him to shrieks of exuberant children (he considers them monsters). And instead of affording him the protection of a dark hall closet when garbage men with clanging cans invaded the yard, I should have compelled him to face the din.

It would have been character-building. But I was too protective. I let him grow up to be afraid.

Before moving Butch I didn't consult a psychiatrist, but I did see a veterinarian. "I understand there are now tranquilizers for pets," I said hopefully.

"Oh, yes," he assured me as he handed me a bottle of brown stuff and a dropper. "Give him a few drops of this about an hour before you put him in the car."

I smelled the stuff, controlled a gag, and said, "But what if he won't drink it?"

"Oh, most cats like it. They ask for more." It sounded like Castoria ads I used to see, but I don't recall ever asking for seconds.

"But Butch isn't most cats. He's a prima donna." I thought of how ecstatic he becomes over chicken—fried, fricasseeed, broiled, under glass, a la king, just out of the refrigerator, or on the hoof—yet he can't be fooled into eating the batter it's often cooked in.

The vet instructed me to put the medicine in his food, and if he wouldn't eat it, just squirt it down his throat.

I did, he wouldn't, and I did . . . almost.

It was like being instructed to catch a sparrow by salting its tail.

Butch sniffed the concoction disdainfully and rebelled. His look plainly said Phooey.

So my sister held him, I pried his mouth open, aimed and fired. Some went down his throat. Some in his face. For an hour he would have nothing to do with me, as if to say, "After trusting you for nine years, I get humiliated like this!"

The one-hour ride was a nightmare, not only for Butch. I should have taken tranquilizer, too. His howls suggested mixed emotions . . . anger, fear, disgust and disillusionment. When other drivers began casting curious glances my way, I closed the car windows so they wouldn't think I was sticking pins into a baby.

Wearily I deposited a forlorn tiger inside my new mobile castle.

Wearily I watched him case the joint critically and frantically. He took a more complete inventory than a seasoned tax collector . . . which doors slide and which ones pull and push . . . how much clearance is there under the bed . . . where does the opening behind the furnace lead to.

Not one means of escaping this portable Alcatraz! He looked beseechingly as if to say, "Dear and trusted (formerly) Mistress, why have you forsaken me? What will become of me in this motorless cage?"

Motorless? Hardly, he soon discovered. Was that weird humming the refrigerator, the forced air furnace, or the garbage disposal? None resembled the motors back at the old homestead.

I opened the refrigerator door. Maybe some chicken and milk would pacify him. He eyed the cavern with apprehension. Was the shiny pink monstrosity the meat dispenser? Not half as sensible as the old stained white one back home.

Each time I closed my eyes that night for some much needed sleep, Butch would stand on his hind legs beside my bed, and berate me. I would open my eyes and see a pair of round, very dark eyes and hear his crescendo of woe. I wonder if he was including in his complaints a reference to his next door friend back home, calico Friskie. . . "Who will jump out and scare her from behind the hedge?" he seemed to say. "Her life will become humdrum."

Again, like a soft-hearted parent, I capitulated by taking him under the covers. Shut away from the glaring newness of his new home his wild, owl-like eyes became green, guileless slits of contentment, his purr expressing his forgiveness.

To assure that Butchie wouldn't become lost during the first few days, I sentenced him to several days of confinement. His bathroom facilities, I thought, were fit for Princess Margaret's cat. He disagreed. As he eyed the fancy waxed pre-fab chamber filled with dainty deodorized sand (cash outlay $2.49), he refused to indulge in such frivolity (What's this world coming to!) until I added a bit of good old-

AUGUST PICTURE OF THE MONTH

Daresay CATS Magazine can well afford to spare a little space in the award issue to be dedicated to the appeal of strays. Susan K. Anda, 763 Bowen Street, Oshkosh, Wisconsin, who devotes her time and her home to abandoned cats and kittens, submitted this expressive photo of Judy.

A kitten was found — caked with dirt, fleas and suffering with a dislocated hip.

The veterinarian considered putting her to sleep but Mrs. Anda saw the markings of a beautiful cat in her. The weeks of care have been repaid. This now healthy, loving cat has given her thanks in many ways to the lady who saved her life.

Mrs. Anda suggested that we make out the U. S. bond award to her local Humane Society should she be fortunate and win.

"Tips to the Novice"

 Blanche
 W. Smith

Happy Anniversary! Yes, this is our Seventy-fifth anniversary, in a way — the seventy-fifth time that you readers have joined with me in discussing our cats in the pages of CATS Magazine.

I hope you all have enjoyed your side of the conversation as much as I have enjoyed mine, and I hope we may spend many more happy hours together.

Now, this month, it seems like a good idea to discuss some of the wrong ideas about cats which we run into in the daily papers and in magazine articles and even every once in a while in books about cats.

Take, for example, such a widely read and authoritative publication as the World Almanac. When I began writing in 1954 I noticed that they showed the gestation period of a cat as 59 days. Only after writing to them once a year for five years was I able to convince them that should be changed. And even now, they show it as 59-63 days, when it should be 63-65 days.

Some other corrections, however, are not so easy to make, since books once published are generally never changed, and corrections of newspaper stories usually reach only a small fraction of the readers who saw the first article.

Just this spring a full-cover picture of an Odd-Eyed White cat appeared in one of our Sunday papers, and the story in connection with it said that this was the only cat in the country with one blue and one gold eye.

How untrue that is all of us cat people know, and the local cat fanciers all wrote to the paper telling them of their mistake, but by now there are probably another million people who think that there is only one Odd-Eyed Cat in the country.

The real facts are that whenever a Blue-Eyed White cat is mated to a cat with gold eyes there is a very good chance that some of the kittens will have odd eyes; some will have gold eyes, and if you are real lucky there will be blue-eyed ones too.

It is true that the Odd-Eyed White used to be looked upon as an outcast and was not recognized by the associations. However, we White breeders have found the odd-eyed cat to be very useful in our efforts to produce short cobby body, short nose, and small ears and a few years ago we were successful in getting them recognized in all the associations. The Odd-Eyed White cat is just as important to the White breeder as is the Blue Cream to the Cream breeder. They go together, so to speak.

There are every year similar newspaper stories about tailless cats, cats with more than five toes to a foot, cats with curly hair, "Mexican" hairless cats, cats with pink eyes, and similar out-of-the-ordinary happenings, all of which give good publicity to cats but which we know are not the one-of-a-kind happenings, which the newspaper writers would have us believe.

Even more serious, I think, are the errors which somehow creep into cat books, even when they are written by well-known authorities.

For instance, on my desk there is a book by a well known British veterinarian which states that cats are immune to snake poison. That is, that they will not suffer if they are bitten by a poisonous snake. Of course, it is rarely that a cat is bitten by a snake, since cats are so quick and skillful. Nevertheless, I can't help but wonder how many cats have been allowed to die because of this advice, since cats, like all warm-blooded animals, are susceptible to the bites of poisonous snakes.

Then, although they don't really mean to do so, most articles and books on genetics give the impression that since white is a dominant color in cats, two White cats bred to each other will produce nothing but White kittens. The catch here, is in the definition of white. The genetics writer means an absolutely purebred white cat which as we practical breeders know does not exist. That is, somewhere in the background if we trace far enough there will always be a cat of another color. This color will always show up again under the proper conditions. So in answer to many of you who have written asking why you get a Black or a Blue or a Tabby in a litter from two Whites, I will say, yes, you shouldn't get them if there is nothing else in your pedigree but Whites. But you and I know that Whites are not bred that way today and that whatever is back of the pedigree will come out some way or another. Another thing, maybe when the mother owner wasn't looking the Silver male mated the White cat, so the Silver strain is in that line of kittens, and that, too, will show up eventually.

While we are discussing White cats, let's straighten out a few other ideas. Of course, we all know that sometimes White cats are deaf, just as you will find deafness along the line in any pink-skinned animal. But would you believe that I have received letters asking me why all White cats are born blind, as well as why all White cats are deaf? That certainly is a fable if there ever was one, and you would be surprised how widespread it is. We White breeders do our best to limit this problem of deafness. Today no breeder will mate two deaf animals, for to do so would be to encourage deafness. We work to try to improve our stock the same as do breeders of dogs, pigs, horses and cows. As to blindness, I have never yet seen a White cat that was blind, unless due to an accident of some kind.

It is surprising, too, how many people think that if their little Persian queen gets out and is mated by a Domestic cat she will be spoiled forever so far as producing purebred kittens.

MIX-UPS

So many people think that the poor little gal wouldn't have a chance once she mates some other variety of male. However, she won't be ruined for future matings — only her kittens of that one litter will not be fullblooded Longhairs. It may be, even, that a few completely shorthair kittens will show up. But, if you watch her as she comes in season the next time and mate her with the proper line she will be sure to have the right kind of kittens.

Also, this little warning, when your little queen is in season and you think that just as long as she is on the loose with only your male she won't mate with the neighbor's tabby male, you may be fooled. Cats do mate indiscriminately, and despite some controversy about it, double conception can and will sometimes happen. So keep your love-sick girl in the proper cage or place if you want to be sure of kind of kittens you're going to get.

Now another question that frequently comes to me, and I noticed to other writers, too, is, "How many times will my queen or should my queen come in season each year?" Most of the books you read, and sometimes even the breeders you ask, will say, "Oh, twice a year — spring and fall." So what happens when your little queen comes in season every two months — in two weeks and out again — over and over again. She doesn't eat, she moans, she keeps getting thinner and thinner, and you keep worrying more and more every day. Yet, this is not uncommon at all, for it happens to many cats that way. If you don't mate them or have them spayed, this cycle will repeat itself with very, very short intervals. Also, some of your queens won't come into cycle until they are two years old or older, some will come in at eight months — yet we writers and veterinarians are being asked all the time to give a definite age when the owner may expect a cat to come into season the first time.

The same question is asked about males too — that is, at what age they may be expected to start siring. And the same answer applies here. There is no specific rule that any one can state for all cats. Each and every one is different and has its own individuality. On questions like these, no two are alike. Only the breeder who knows her own line and has followed the history of her cats can give you any kind of an accurate answer; and that, of course, will apply only to the specific line which she knows.

To go back to our books again. Did you ever see a black cat with blue eyes? Not, at least, after it was twelve weeks old. However, on my desk is a $5.95 book by a well-known cat authority. On the cover stands as big as life a Black cat with sky-blue eyes.

Such mistakes, are only annoying. But here is one that is really serious. In an English book published in 1957 the author recommends various home treatments for feline enteritis. You and I know, that vaccination is the only real preventive of

WORLD'S LARGEST SCRATCHING POST

In California's Sequoia National Park, there is a group of giant trees on which the thick, fibrous bark has been shredded and torn away to great depth. This is the work of roaming bears which dig into the bark to remove a form of scale or "hangnail" growth that they find annoying. Stately trees, centuries old—250 ft. high and measuring 20 ft. in diameter at the base—are truly the world's largest scratching posts.

THE WORLD'S BEST SCRATCHING POST FOR CATS

LOWE'S Scratchin' Post, shown below, is the only post which pet cats can sink their claws into with a digging motion—as the bears do in the bark of the giant Sequoias!

LOWE'S Scratchin' Post gives cats relief from irritating scale that collects on their claws, providing "manicures" without damage to home furnishings. Look for it at pet counters everywhere!

THE LAW AND YOUR CAT

by John Warren Giles

PART I

Hundreds of dogs have barked, bitten and growled their way through the law books but the more respectable cats have made many less and more modest appearances.

The time of the cat's first domestication is lost in the mists of the dawn of history, but it is apparent that the cat was a domestic animal among the early Egyptians, by whom it came to be regarded as sacred. From that day to this it has been a dweller in the homes of men. In no other animal has affection for home been more strongly developed, and in none, when absent from home can the animus revertendi be more surely assumed to exist.

It is clear from the popular meaning of the word "domestic" and from our knowledge of its habits gained from fact and experience that the cat is a domestic animal.

In the early cases it was urged that the cat could not be the subject of larceny, and therefore its owner could have but a qualified property in it. But among the ancient Britons a cat was held to have intrinsic value and the theft of a cat was punishable by a fine.

To the early Britons the cat was regarded as peculiarly the guardian of the King's granary and therefore any person guilty of killing a cat could be punished by having to deliver to the King an amount of wheat measured by the size of the cat. To determine this amount, the legal formula was "let the cat be hung up by the tip of its tail with head touching the floor and let grains of wheat be poured upon it until the extremity of its tail be covered with wheat." The amount required to do that was the amount that the offender had to deliver as a penalty.

When, however, larceny became the subject of capital punishment, the Courts, to mitigate the severity of the penalty, held that certain animals were not the subject of larceny as they were not fit for food, or as a base, or as kept only for pleasure, curiosity or whim. Blackstone, the ancient English law writer, described such animals to be "dogs, bears, cats, apes, parrots and singing birds" and says their value is not intrinsic, but depends only on the caprice of the owner.

The law was of course later changed in England and the United States, and so today a cat which is kept as a household pet may be properly considered a thing of value and the subject of larceny.

How about the liability of the owner of a cat for its malfeasance? We will discuss this and other practical aspects of the law and your cat next month.

THE RETURN OF VENUS

by
R. Bretnor

Wherever cats are concerned, even in small matters, strange coincidences seem certain to turn up, as though unseen and mysterious forces were at work. This is a story of a cat coincidence which goes back twenty years, and has its origin in another story infinitely older.

During 1939 and the first part of 1940, at the tail end of the Depression, I worked as a guard at the Golden Gate International Exposition. Sometimes the job was fascinating and sometimes deadly dull, but I had no assignment which I liked better than my final one in the Art Gallery. I left it with a great many pleasant memories, and most pleasant of all was my recollection of The Birth of Venus.

The outstandingly important and most widely publicized of the great paintings on loan there was Botticelli's famous canvas, which shows the goddess emerging from a seashell on the shore. This, however, was not the Birth of Venus I had in mind. Shortly after Botticelli's masterpiece went back to Italy, a well-known San Francisco artist, Dorr Bothwell, painted another Birth of Venus. It showed a dainty and very feminine Siamese stepping out of an enormous pink seashell into a world which she quite obviously realized was made expressly for her benefit. It formed part of an exhibit in the Gallery, and I fell in love with it. Every time I passed it—and I passed it much more often than was necessary—I used to wish that I could own it.

I left the Fair to go on active duty; subsequently worked for OWI during most of the War; then took up freelance writing. I married, and three Siamese came to live with us, and I saw nothing whatsoever of Miss Bothwell's charming picture. It became simply something very pleasant lost in the vanished past. Then, early in June of 1959, I happened to drop in at the fine old San Francisco auction house of Butterfield & Butterfield, and found a miscellaneous auction scheduled. I looked the items over hastily, and brought the catalogue home with me—and we found that one lot, No. 1477, was described as FRAMED OIL PAINTING, CAT. This, we decided, was something that we at least had to see.

So I attended the auction—the first one I had gone to at Butterfield's in fifteen years—and there she was! Naturally, I recognized her instantly. Then I despaired. Surely someone in the crowded room would bid her up to more than I could afford. But the gods were good—or at least the goddess was. She came up at the very end of the sale, after the audience had thinned out, and finally Mr. Butterfield knocked her down to me, meowing very good-naturedly as he did so! He was echoed by several in the audience, as well as by the floor-man who came to take my name. I felt like Moncrief himself on his induction into the French Academy.

And that was not the end of it. When we got her home, we found that our haphazardly acquired living-room furniture, part of which was a rebellious pink, had suddenly been disciplined and harmonized by shell, and shore, and Venus' seal points. Recognizing her for what she is, our own three little people are not even jealous of a new cat in the house.

They know that Venus, Goddess and Queen of Love, has always been identified with cats. As W. Oldfield Howie has shown, in The Cat in the Mysteries of Magic and Religion, as Isis she was constantly represented by the Egyptians in feline form, and as Freya of the Norsemen she rode in a car drawn by cats. Mme. Deshouillieres, in one of the poems which Moncrief printed as an appendix to that first of all good cat books, Les Chats, has her cat Grisette boast of an even more intimate connection, basing it on the legend that, when the Titans assaulted Heaven, Jove ordered the gods and goddesses to hide in the form of animals on earth:

*Ore was a Bull, and one a Bear;
Another in Bird's finery was gaily plumed:
The Queen of Love assumed
A cat's form fine and fair;
And as she is a good Princess,
Who prides herself upon her duty,
She soon indulged the tenderness
Of a young tomcat smitten by her beauty,
So much so that the lovely Goddess
Had Kittens in some quantity.
It is from this source divine
That I take my origin.*

Who among cat lovers, seeing Miss Bothwell's portrait of the goddess, can doubt the legend?

fashioned earth and gravel.

My orange-nosed refugee continued to adjust. In place of his all-night explorations through jungles of geraniums, calla lilies and garbage cans, there's a quick early-evening constitutional through the mustard-filled orange grove behind the park. Instead of his afternoon sun baths on the sewing machine in the back bedroom, he ponders on the back step of the trailer, protectively screened by my reed patio fencing.

He's learned to accomplish an amazing amount of prowling without going out of our 50 by 10 home. He covers every foot each day as thoroughly as an inspecting officer, opening cupboard doors I forget to latch, hopeful that some fruitful quest will produce a fugitive rodent from a nearby tract house or apartment area—He was always good at light mousekeeping. Or a nice crunchy cricket, the kind he used to find in the moonlight behind the fence back home. He never touches a thing in my cupboards. He looks at me as if to say, "I'm only looking, thank you." He only wants to show his prowess at opening them.

He agrees that my big sliding glass doors are worth every nickel that I paid for them. Never in all his nine years and lives has he had such an enormous window. When the drapes are opened all the way, it's even better than being outdoors. The night a huge red dragon with a siren and flashing red eyes swept by draped with rubber-suited men from outer space, Butch had a closeup without having to duck for safety. One night I noticed a bulge in the drapes. The bulge was Butchie. He'd learned to go under them instead of waiting for them to be drawn.

Butch has learned he doesn't have to be the outdoor type to get exercise. Considerable momentum can be achieved in a fifty-foot run. The carpeted living room affords a firm footing for takeoff, and the adjoining waxed kitchen floor is dandy for figure skating.

Well-meant amateur psychiatry can boomerang where discipline is concerned. We had decided when Butch was tiny that he must be taught that clawing upholstery comes to a no-good end. As he vigorously attacked the side of our best chair he was clutched and thrust out the front door for punishment. The wages of such frivolity is banishment, we insisted.

What did it teach him? That in order to gain exit one must claw the best chair.

Even after we added loud but painless swats with a newspaper, he was unconvinced, only more confused. He now scratches like the dickens and makes a mad dash for the door in his attempt to avoid the swat. Poor thing, he just can't understand why he must do penance for the sake of a little fresh air.

And what did he learn when we decided he must not sit on a chair unless something is spread on it first? Exactly that. That if a freshly-ironed blouse or shirt is spread across a chair to dry, it is for him to deposit his derriere on. You should see him trying to squeeze his broad beam into the confines of an eight-inch hot pan holder in a kitchen chair!

You see, he is a good cat. He does just what we taught him.

When asked a question, he doesn't answer with a common garden variety meow. It's a more cultured "Mmmmm," with the voice inflection of an Academy Award winner. If we ask again, he looks at us as if to say, "What do you want, a filibuster?"

Butch will soon be a confirmed trailerist. He loves many of the same features about the trailer way of life that I do . . . privacy (he can slurp his milk noisily without someone in the next apartment complaining); a yard, but not too much; outdoor living (we sit on the patio for hours); beauty (he inspects my horticultural pursuits with a Luther Burbank enthusiasm); and friendly people (after he observes them from beneath the coffee table a while).

Butchie is Beauty with paws that can pad gently or clutch a tree sharply. He's a politician with emerald naivete in his eyes. He's Loyalty without reservations. He's Pride in spite of the questionable half of his ancestry. We're sure about the fifty percent Persian.

Yes, Butchie is a good cat and a first class trailerist.

There must be some way out of this portable AICATraz!

Unfortunately there are some pets that do require regular attention and medication. Situations as you describe can be very difficult to work with. Perhaps time and the use of several different treatments as conditions would warrant will bring about a cure.

All our cat will eat daily is raw liver or kidneys to which we add one-quarter teaspoon of Pervinal. Besides this, usually once a week he also will eat one raw egg yolk and one small dish of milk when thoroughly persuaded. He also enjoys several dried fishballs weekly. Is this sufficient to keep our cat healthy and to help him towards a long life with us? If not could you kindly offer some suggestions? He is always full of pep and has a wonderful nature. His coat appears good, though he only weighs near eight pounds, and we are wondering if he is getting a balanced diet. Also, he has a passion for Spanish olives. Would it be harmful to continue giving him one daily as we have been doing?

—Carol W. Muccillo

54 Elmwood Ave., East Orange, N. J.

The supplement that you are using is no doubt supplying many of the nutrients that are in short supply in the meat. On the basis of others that have been and are being fed a like diet, he no doubt will be able to have a normal life expectancy. (as for the olive—what does he do with the rest of the martini?)

NEW SECRETARY, RECORD CONSOLIDATION FOR ACFA

The American Cat Fanciers Association has named M. Porter Walley as Secretary and General Manager and has consolidated its Championship and Sweepstakes record-keeping into one office under the direction of Dorothy Walley. Mrs. Walley has been Assistant Secretary and Recorder and her title will now be simplified to "Assistant Secretary".

Russell Middleton, former Secretary and General Manager, and founder of ACFA, asked to be relieved of the responsibility because of his health. Mr. and Mrs. Walley have been cat fanciers for twelve years and are charter members of ACFA. Their Wah-Lee cattery name has been borne by many famous Siamese.

The consolidation of records into the one office will take some time, and all correspondents are asked to be patient for a few weeks. Thereafter the flow of Championships and other information should be greatly speeded up.

ABOUT JULY

Our thanks and appreciation to you breeders who so kindly called our attention to a few discrepancies in the July issue. We were moving our office during the preparation of this issue, and apparently were unable to give all the checking necessary.

MIDWESTERNS — OS Highest-Scoring Domestic should have been shown as RM Tr. Ch. Karabee Tiger Lily owned by David Bjerkeng. All-Midwestern Chocolate Point Male is, as correctly shown in the listings: Ch. Ko Ko Khan of Madali; HM is: Gr. & Qd. Ch. Green Lane Van of Velvet Shadow. Db. Gr. & Qd. Ch. Blue Gables Glamour Girl is the third five-time Wilson winner.

WESTERNS — Db. Ch. Krebs' Lanvin of Norpark was listed without his "degrees": (AWK, AHMK 59), and Blue-Check's King Tut of Tops Kats without his correct "title": Quintuple Champion.

SHOW REPORTS — Best OS Kitten in Minneapolis Persian Show (ACA, Jan. 16-17) was Carousal Jewel, Lilac Point, owned by Mrs. L. L. Lessard.

NEW CLUBS

The Franciscan Silver Fanciers held their first meeting recently in Santa Clara, California. Officers elected were: President, Doris Cook; Secretary, Mrs. Robert Weston, 4 Elliott Drive, Pleasant Hill, Calif.; Treasurer, Evelyn Simpson.

Meetings will be held quarterly. Interested cat people should contact the Secretary.

The Motor City Cat Club has been formed in the Detroit Area and has affiliated with United Cat Federation. Officers are: President, William Gernae; Vice President, Drusilla Ruthenberg; Second Vice President, Helena Jobe; Treasurer, Carl Czadzeck; Secretary, Pearle E. Czadzeck. Directors: Lucille Gasnik, Marjorie Wagler, Allen Kerr. All interested in attending our meeting or joining the club show contact the Secretary.

ECF KITTEN MATCH

The Eastern Cat Fanciers' First Annual Kitten Match held on June 4th in the Grange Hall at Goshenville, Pa. was a tremendous success . . . financially and socially, and a fitting prelude to our Seventh Annual All Breed Show to be in Philadelphia, September 25.

Kittens, Neuters, Spays and Household Pets were judged by Louise Fiedler, All Breed—Mrs. Eugene Fouque, Longhair Specialty—and Miss Elinor Dennis, Shorthair Specialty. In the All Breed Division, Best Kitten, Best Tabby & Tortie and Best Longhair went to Robaway Belle Baba, three-month-old Blue Cream, Thompson. In the Longhair Specialty, Best Kitten, and Best Solid Color went to Robaway Belle Bebe, Cream female litter sister of the AB winner, Thompson. Best Kitten in the Shorthair Specialty was Cleorita Celia, Seal Point Siamese Female, Moncure.

Fanciers Forum

GEBHART ON NEW CFA RULES

CFA has recently made sweeping changes in their show rules. For championship confirmation now a cat must win four "winners ribbons" under three different judges — the point system for shows is abolished, and each show counts equally.

I think all cat fanciers in all associations will be interested in learning what this means. It will have far-reaching effects, and we should all give the matter a great deal of serious thought.

Here are some of my reactions:

1) With many other fanciers, I fought long and hard to keep the single color specialties in demand, but the need for counters caused the formation of the all-Longhair and all-Shorthair specialties. We can now bring about breed and color specialties once again. It will not be very long when you people will be wanting special shows put on by the Burmese or Abyssians, for example, just for their own breeds. This is not far off for others, either, with the increasing popularity of all of these breeds.

2) The comeback of individual specialties will also make it possible for more qualified judges to be added to the list. New judges may now begin by doing the breed they have the most knowledge of. Previously, we have had judges in the Fancy judging breeds in which they had no interest (and were unqualified to judge) only because they were forced to in order to get assignments.

3) The simplicity will make it easier for all to understand. The ease with which an exhibitor can determine when a cat has completed its championship requirements will clear up a lot of confusion for new-comers — and even for older and more experienced fanciers who find it difficult to keep count. In fact, under the old system it was almost impossible, unless one left the show with a completely marked catalog — something that even the judges are lucky to get. Besides, what intelligent new-comers would ever think of counting the Siamese entries to see how many points their Persians had won??? Even now, I fail to understand why the Shorthairs should have anything to do with determining the number of points a Longhair cat receives. I'll go further — I don't even feel that the number of Blue Longhairs entered should have anything to do with the points that a WHITE Longhair gets. They never at any time compete with each other for the Winners ribbon.

4) It will prevent an exhibitor who puts in a large entry (fifteen or twenty cats) from lowering the points of the show by pulling out all of the entries for one reason or another. Also, it will now be unnecessary to pad the classes with a lot of cats who have no business to be in a show. Many times cats that are not in the best of health have been brought to the show anyway because they were needed for counters. Shows will always need entries, but we want quality and healthy cats. It is also common knowledge that in the past several shows here in the East have permitted some of the owners of large catteries to enter extra cats for the sake of counters, free of charge, even though this was against the CFA rules. Now there will be no reason to resort to such subterfuges.

5) This will boost the small shows — and will tend to INCREASE their entries. For until now many exhibitors would not attend small shows if there was a question of there being less than four points.

I hope this has helped to explain the new rule and also to show how effective it will be in improving our shows. Best wishes for a fine show season.

— Richard Gebhardt

PUREBRED?

Dear Editors:

I have always been sharply critical of experimental breeders who would cross Manx with Siamese, Burmese, Russian Blues, and/or Abyssinians.

Now, in view of Madeline Christy's opinions (Fanciers Forum, June) on an earlier article about hybrids by Ann Manley it would seem that my critical opinion may be unjustified.

After all, these "progressive" (Manx?) breeders would still be breeding pure "foreign shorthairs" which in no way would involve Domestic.

JUDGES' ASSOCIATION

Dear Editors:

You carried an article by Dorothy Graham a while ago about an association of judges. I'm looking forward to the day when we judges do have an association of our own upon which every association could draw. This would eliminate to some extent that bugaboo of politics and favoritism.

The judges themselves would keep their members in line so as to protect their worthwhile associates. Working judges by virtue of the many and varied cats they handle, should be in a better position to clarify show standards. With a large pool of judges to draw from the clubs wishing to put on a show would find it less difficult to vary their judges.

The way things are today, it appears that because a judge is capable of judging one Association's shows, he is incapable of judging a show put on by a different Association. Of course, that isn't true.

I and other judges have had the experience of being asked to judge by clubs in other associations from which we are excluded by the rules. No club has to ask for the services of a judge who is a judge of another association. When they do, there must be a reason. It could be that the members prefer the other Association's judge to any of their own. Shouldn't that be their privilege? Shouldn't we help the Fancy, the clubs, and the members by giving them as wide a choice of judges as possible?

CHI CHAROEN is proud of our Double Champion Moonshyne — AE Blue Point

Thanks to the judges, who, for the eighth consecutive year, have liked our line well enough to rate us among the top-scoring cats in the East.

Thanks, too, to CATS for making these All-Eastern awards possible.

"Shyne" and our other Blue, Seal, and Chocolate Champions at stud to approved female.

Beautiful Kittens now on Hand.

Ch. Stonybrook Guy-Lum of Go-Seek-Us

Eastern Hon. Mention Longhair Male Kitten

This little Cream Guy was my pet, and I sure did have fun showing him. Now he is grown up and is a champion. Lovely kittens from him on hand, and a beautiful Tortie from "Robb-way". Thank you, Edgar and Margaret, for parting with this lovely cat. I'll try to do as well with your beautiful Blue Creams.

Go-Seek-Us is very sorry I didn't get pictures in time for the August issue. So please watch for September CATS when I'll have photos because I'd like everybody to see my beautiful Black Male, My Silver Tabby, and my Pet Guy!

BACK FENCE

(from page 38)

Many city dwellers live alone and in small apartments. They find, after a day's work, the care a dog demands, exacting and sometimes tiring. Although many buildings forbid pets, Dr. Harvey wishes he had a dollar for every cat that is surreptitiously kept.

He cautions confined-cat owners to beware of the danger of overfeeding their pets. Country and suburban cats can find ways to exercise excess fat off, but the city cat has no such freedom.

Too often from boredom, abetted by owners who think a cat must be fed every time it seeks food, the apartment cat fairly eats itself into poor health.

Dr. Harvey's final advice is that your cat will be healthier, more active, happier, and more playful if he is kept a little on the hungry side.

Another eminent doctor made the cat world sit up lately. Henrietta Hitchcock's column in the New York World Telegram and Sun dealt with the discovery made by a British veterinary surgeon, Dr. A. S. King of the University of Bristol, now teaching at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. King began a study of intervertebral disks of the feline about four years ago. It had been believed that cats do not suffer diseases of the spine.

After extensive work with two hundred cats, Dr. King feels that although vertebral disks seldom cause obvious symptoms, unless serious enough to cause paralysis, cats do suffer from spinal ailments. He suggests that this may well be the reason many cats dislike being stroked on the back. They may not complain to their doctor, but they can let you know they prefer to be left alone.

He pointed out that this finding may prove that all human spinal ills can't be traced to man's upright position. All God's children got trouble.

And we were particularly sorry to hear that Herman, The Wharf Tiger, of whom we wrote in last month's Back Fence, has since gone on to another world. One of our readers sent in the clipping of Herman's demise from the Charleston News and Courier. Capt. Spady said he found him, evidently a drowning victim, on one of the breakwaters at the wharf.

As he had loved and lived by the sea, Capt. Spady gave him a befitting burial.

"I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky . . ." — J. L.

this dreadful cat disease, and trying to stop it with home treatment is like trying to hold back the tide with our hands. It makes us wonder how ignorant and irresponsible authors can be when they are sentencing to death thousands of kittens by suggesting anything other than vaccination by veterinarians.

Don't think that I am complaining here that I don't want you to send in your questions. That wasn't the reason for writing this article. I just wanted to cover a few of the most widespread errors and misconceptions about our cats.

So keep asking your questions of Doctor Renaux or of myself or of your veterinarian. We are always glad to help you.

Our Junior Fanciers

Profile of the month—

Freth Lou Brodie, twelve, lives in Madison, Wisconsin, and in this very house. She's my daughter, BUT she has her own ideas about cats. When she was eight, she saved up money from working around the house (her allowance), and money she was sent as a present to buy a good SP Sia female of her own. She bred to one of my males for which her stud fee was the return of first choice kitten. She ended up with two kittens, one of which she "paid" to me and the other she sold. (The cat she sold has gone on to make a CH. and to go BEST CAT.)

The sale of this kitten paid her way to Girl Scout camp for two weeks that summer. She bred her SP again and sold her bred with the understanding that she would be returned first and third choice kittens, one of these to pay for her stud fee and the other for her to keep. Unfortunately, the one she kept died at six months but that didn't stop Freth. Now at twelve she has another SP female, a granddaughter of her original cat. She's been shown once to go BOC and BOX Novice. Freth has spent four years of attending shows, including out of town shows. She's in her fourth generation of her own breeding AND SHE'S BEATING ME IN THE SHOW RING!

She now owns MaKhanDa Mystere of Usaf, two of her daughters and a son. The son is an exceptionally good young male and if I want to use him, I shall have to pay my daughter first choice kitten or cash for the stud service!

Question and Answer

As I said last time, several Jrs. have asked for help with cattery planning. I've covered where the cats should be kept and this time I'll give some information about cages.

No cage should be shorter than four feet nor narrower than two feet. Ample height in the cage should be allowed for a shelf of some type to allow the cat jumping room. Of course, the larger the cage, the nicer for the cat. Wire cages as seen in the shows make inexpensive as well as convenient caging as they can be folded away when not in use and are easily transported.

If you are making your cage, I would suggest that you use half-inch hardware cloth wire on the sides, and quarter-inch hardware cloth on the floor with a removable piece of board or Masonite covering most of the wire flooring. This will help you to keep your cages clean. For protection, the cages should have some type of a solid top.

Each cage should be provided with the following things: A scratching post which can be made from a log or one covered with a piece of clean old rug. A litter pan which should be of a material for easy cleaning. I use plastic dishpans available in most hardware stores or supermarkets. The shallow pans are better than the deep ones as they tip over less easily. A water dish—and it should be either heavy enough or designed so that it will not tip and spill. If your cat likes a nesting box, a wooden apple box, a cardboard carton, or a specially-made box can be included. In the winter, outdoor cats can be protected from cold weather by a wooden box or barrel with a small opening. This box should also have a 25-watt light bulb wired into it to provide warmth. If the light bothers your cat, surround it by a tin can which will let the warmth through but eliminate the strong light.

Next column, I'll be back and try to explain the wins higher than BOC (Best of Color.)

Tommy Brodie

The Back Fence

It is that time again! A month, three weeks or the usual two weeks to ignore alarm clocks, forget city traffic and crowded lunch-counters. It's vacation season! Wonderful, wonderful days to do nothing.

The Newark, Ohio, Advocate Tribune printed some advice given by Dr. Leighton of the New York Speyer Animal Hospital on how to travel with your cat. He reminds us that the family cat is attached to its comfortable home and, in most instances, hates to leave it, especially in a small box with only tiny air holes.

Cats are apt to actually suffer in carrying cases and in extremely warm weather could possibly have heat prostration if confined for any length of time.

Please, if you are planning a trip and are going to take your cat with you, arrange for his comfort too. Dr. Leighton suggests you make a compartment that can be put on the back seat of your car. He recommends one about 20" x 20" x 18". A wooden frame covered with some sort of screening with one hinged end so you can open and close it will suffice. There is a new plastic screen on the market that eliminates possible injury by wire scratches. Cover the bottom with papers — for an accident's sweet sake — and you will have a happier holiday companion.

One traveler who didn't have to worry about such is Scamper who went to Italy by jet.

According to the San Mateo, California, Time and News Leader, ten-year-old Philip Scarpace, Scamper's owner, had been miserably lonely since his family moved to Milan five months ago. There was no Italian cat who could make him forget the pet he left in San Mateo.

The family who had been caring for Scamper since Philip had left the States had done all they could to keep the cat happy, but every day she sat on the window sill waiting for the boy.

The Scarpaces couldn't bear to see their son and the cat so unhappy, so they made arrangements with Pan American to fly the cat to Italy.

It meant a special carrier, a physical, a health certificate, a visa and a jet-liner ticket. The total cost? A little over $50.00. But, even at that, it was a bargain for Scamper was smuggling in an undetermined number of little American kittens.

It is fairly difficult to estimate the actual number of kittens or cats at any time in the country. Dr. Bernard Harvey had a special article in the Miami, Florida, Herald, and in it he estimated that there are about 28 million cats in the United States. Roughly, eight to ten million live in cities, the rest being farm or suburban cats.

In Dr. Harvey's practice, he has noticed the increasing evidence that the cat is growing rapidly in popularity as well as in population. It seems logical to him, for he could name no other animal that offers an owner so much enjoyment and companionship for so little trouble.

Good health
ahead

when regularly fed a balanced diet

A cat's prime of life—the period of its greatest breeding potential and award-winning beauty—will be longer and healthier if it's nourished consistently on a diet abundant with health-giving nutrients.

And Puss 'n Boots, as cat fanciers and breeders know, contains every nutrient a cat is known to need. Fresh-caught whole fish are a natural storehouse of vitamins, minerals, and proteins; whole-grain cereals supply carbohydrates; and extra Vitamins B₁ and E are added to round out the complete range of nutrients in every can. As the chart shows, there's a world of variety in every Puss 'n Boots meal, too.

Feed whole-fish Puss 'n Boots regularly, beginning today. You'll see the improvement—in glossier coats, more even dispositions, and brighter eyes—within less than three short weeks.

EVERY DAY—ALL THIS NOURISHMENT IN EVERY 8 OZ. CAN

SUNDAY
WEDNESDAY
THURSDAY
FRIDAY
SATURDAY

A can of Puss 'n Boots has twice as much calcium—for strong bones—as a 10 oz. glass of milk.

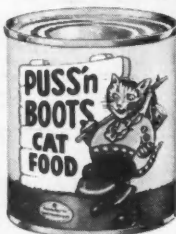

There is more protein in a can of Puss 'n Boots than in a juicy lamb chop.

Puss 'n Boots contains five times as much blood-building iron as a cup of steamed spinach.

In Puss 'n Boots there is as much riboflavin—for healthy eyes—as in an equal serving of lean raw beef.

Plus other vital nutrients essential to your cat's well-being.
